SOPHIA FARAGO: EIN DANDY IN NÖTEN (A DANDY IN DISTRESS)

Part 5 of the Lancroft Abbey-series

Nicolas Barnett has everything a young nobleman in 1821 could possibly ask for. Good looks, a fashion-conscious tailor, a city apartment in hip Mayfair, a friend to accompany him through all of his eccentricities – and a generous guardian to finance them. So, after finishing his studies in Cambridge, he spends his days at the races, his evenings with Brandy and card tables and his nights in the beds of various actresses.

This abruptly ends though, when Nicolas turns up late for the coronation of King George IV. His patron at the end of his patience and all his financial means suddenly cancelled Nicolas decides to join his brother Bertram in Prussia.

To pay for the passage he takes a job at John Sanders' counting house in Dover, who's come to riches in overseas trade. Nicolas and the salesman's daughter Claire fall deeply for each other. But is a trader's daughter good enough for the brother of a Viscount? Or is maybe an impecunious nobleman not good enough for the rich merchant's family?

STEFANIE GERCKE:

#1: SCHATTEN IM WASSER (SHADOWS IN THE WATER)

In 1849, Catherine le Roux accompanies her father on an expedition in the jungles of the Kongo, where he dies from a mysterious disease. Catherine is alone and almost destitute.

In Cape Town, she meets Johann Steinach, a farmer from Zululand. He instantly falls in love with her. Catherine believes him to be the rich owner of large estates who lives in luxury, and accepts his marriage proposal. They sail to Natal. In a storm their ship breaks up on the rocks off the primitive settlement of Durban and they lose their entire possessions. They make their dangerous way through the malaria infested African wilderness to Inqaba, Johann's farm. Reaching it, Catherine finds a simple hut, no trace of luxury. She flies in a towering rage, but, having no other choice, she stays and takes up the challenge of magnificent, wondrous, merciless Africa...

#2: FEUERWIND (FIREWIND)

In winter 1878, Cetshwayo, king of the Zulus, calls the inner circle of his councillors to a secret place, as the ominous wind the white man has sowed has long since grown into a storm. The Zulus feel threatened by the white settlers, who cast covetous eyes onto fertile, lush Zululand. Inqaba, the farm of Catherine and Johann Steinach in Zululand is still under the protection of the king, but when a mysterious stranger secretly supplies the Zulus with arms and stirs up their anger towards the colonists, their paradise is threatened. On top of that, Catherine's son Stefan marries the Zulugirl Lulamani despite them. Now, the family is caught between two fronts. Catherine also has to worry about her absent daughter, who, against the will of her parents, has traveled into far away Germany to study medicine.

STEFANIE GERCKE:

EIN LAND, DAS HIMMEL HEISST (A LAND CALLED HEAVEN)

Jill Court is in her early twenties when her beloved brother is brutally murdered. While dealing with this tremendous shock, Jill suffers a miscarriage and her wedding with the aspiring architect Martin has to be postponed. For Jill, who until then lived a sheltered life on her parents' farm Inqaba in Zululand, this means a cruel coming to terms with South African reality. And there are even more heavy blows ahead her when Jill runs the risk of losing the family farm once and for all...

Praises:

Shadows in the Water

„With the emotions from Gone with the Wind and the scenery from Out of Africa and you get an idea of what Gercke's novel is like: beautiful mainstream cinema, but in print." Brigitte

Across the River to Africa

„As usual, the author, having lived in South Africa herself for years, manages to weave political realities into an enthralling story. [...] Across the River to Africa is once again, a must-read." Münchener Merkur

„The combination of family saga, political thriller, dramatic love story and biography has once again all it takes to be a bestseller." Bild der Frau

„Reliably, Stefanie Gercke has provided her readers with real deal, entering novels from Africa for years. [...] Her books are infused with the profound knowledge of culture and people that are Gercke's topic." Welt am Sonntag

#3: DAS SPIEL DER KÖNIGE (GAMBLE OF THE KINGS)

England, A.D. 1455: Young Julian of Waringham is considered the black sheep of his strongly Lancastrian family, as he would rather see Richard Duke of York on the throne than the weak and occasionally insane Lancaster King Henry VI. Only when the conflict between the two houses erupts to become the "Wars of the Roses" does Julian realize where his loyalties truly lie. His twin sister Blanche is another blot on the family honour: Outlawed for mutilating her husband she flees to Wales where she forms a highly scandalous alliance with Jasper Tudor, King Henry's half-brother. The Lancastrians fight a losing battle in England and Wales until Edward IV takes the throne as the first king of the House of York. Hard times for Julian and Blanche, and in resisting the new regime they are not only risking their own lives. For in far-away Wales Henry Tudor is a hostage in the clutches of the most vicious Yorkist, a helpless little boy who becomes Lancaster's last hope...

England, 1360: after the death of his father, former Earl of Waringham, 12-year-old Robin runs away from the monastery school and finds work as a stable boy on the estate once owned by his family. As the son of a presumed traitor he has the status of a landless peasant, utterly exposed to the whims of the nobility. Especially Mortimer, the son of the new Earl, tyrannizes Robin in any way he can. But Robin finds his own path. Side by side with the charismatic Duke of Lancaster he experiences military campaigns, revolts and political triumphs - and meets women, who are as dangerous as they are beautiful. As a young, incapable King leads England to the brink of disaster, Robin is suddenly confronted with his former arch enemy...

Part 4 of the Lancroft Abbey-series

1814: Napoleon is defeated and has withdrawn to Elba into exile. Numerous international royals and leading diplomats are gathering in Vienna, to negotiate the future of Europe. Amongst them is Bertram Barnett, traveling as the Duke of Landmark's adjutant. Also part of the Duke's entourage is Bertram's cousin Agatha, an educated, self-confident and well-traveled young lady. Between her and the conservative widower Landmark conflicts are arising from the first moment of their journey on. And when the Duke is finally asking for her hand, Agatha – already deeply in love with him - decides to set conditions and put Landmark's feeling to the test.

Her cousin Bertram meanwhile has lost his heart to the adorable Hanni who unfortunately does not befit his social status. But Bertram is willing to stand up for his love, not only against an indignant Victorian society but also against his very strict mother.

A scandal hitherto unprecedented in the Barnett family...

England, 1813. Penelope, the second eldest daughter of Viscountess of Panswick, has just declined her fourth wedding proposal. Since her heart has been broken at her debut in London, she would much prefer to live a placid life surrounded by her beloved animals on Lancroft Abbey. But Lady Panswick has other plans for her and wants to marry off her daughters as soon as possible. Therefore she organizes a great ball to which all the suitable bachelors are invited. And she makes Penelope promise to accept her fifth marriage proposal no matter what.

But the preparations for the ball are not the only issue that keeps Penelope busy: She is also tending for an injured soldier, who - according to her mother's assumptions- is a distant relative of their family. But who indeed is this man?

Julian Romsey, Duke of Wellbrooks, has become tired of being chased by wanting-to-get-married debutants. That's why he decides to follow his grandmother's advice and, to get things settled, to finally get married. But, indifferent as he is, his only plans are for a marriage of convenience and so he accepts his grandmother's first suggestion - even though this bride seems to be a country wench par excellence...

Miss Olivia Redbridge is taken by complete surprise when she is being proposed. Instead of going after beautiful dresses and the tittle tattle of London's high society, she managed her widowed father's household and helped to raise her younger siblings. But now Lord Redbrige has married again and even though she likes her new mother-in-law, Olivia is eager to find a husband. So she makes her way to London, where not only for her, but also for the Duke is waiting a huge surprise...

LIONEL DAVIDSON: THE CHELSEA MURDERS

The Chelsea Murders (1978) was Lionel Davidson's seventh novel, prompting the Daily Telegraph to declare, 'Lionel Davidson is one of the best and most versatile thriller writers we have.'

A terrifying, grotesque figure bursts into a young art student's room. Head covered with a clown's wig, face concealed by a smiling mask, it wears the rubber gloves of a surgeon. The girl is seized, chloroformed, suffocated and - horrifyingly - beheaded. This is only the beginning of a series of murders terrorising London's fashionable bohemia. The police target three avant-garde filmmakers. One of them is mocking the other two, and openly taunting the police as well. But which of them is behind these appalling crimes?

LIONEL DAVIDSON: MAKING GOOD AGAIN

Making Good Again, first published in 1968, was Lionel Davidson's fourth novel. The principal character, James Raison, is a lawyer. In Germany to deal with a claim for reparation he is plunged into the old conflict between Jew and Nazi. His trip becomes more dangerous as the legal aspects of the case become more complicated. At the same time he has to cope with his affair with Elke and his fascination for her fascist mother, Magda.

As with all Lionel Davidson's novels it was showered with praise on publication. The Sunday Times called it 'a classical thriller told with much subtlety' and the Evening Standard 'part thriller, part morality - and doubly successful'.

THE NIGHT OF WENCESLAS

Lionel Davidson's debut thriller was a massive success on first publication in 1960. The New Yorker said it was 'so enriched with style, wit, and a sense of serious comedy that it all but transcends its kind.'

Young Nicholas Whistler, dissolute and disillusioned, lives a life of monotony in London. Caught up in a petty money-lenders' dispute, he is sent to Prague to discharge the debt by carrying out a simple assignment. Instead he is dragged deep into the dangerous world of Cold War espionage and the battle for atomic supremacy. Trapped between the secret police and the amorous clutches of the mysterious Vlasta, Nicholas realises he is now a spy, whether he likes it or not.

How it all ended – how it all began

Who is going to rule the enchanted elf marches in the days to come? Will the cruel dragons seize power or will the rough dwarves? Or will the mysterious elves, whose powers have as yet remained in the dark? When the two siblings Emerelle and Meliander embark on a quest for their missing mother, the legendary dragon elf Nandalee, they are still totally unaware that their voyage will change the fate of elf marches' peoples irreversibly. While Emerelle choses to fight, her calmer brother comes across a young, mysterious elf who fascinates him at first glance. But there are secrets which's roots one should not touch on ...

BERNHARD HENNEN: ELFEN-SERIES #1: DIE ELFEN (THE ELVES)

Farodin and Nuramon, two elves, are wooing Noroelle for two decades. When Emerelle, the elven queen, announces that she will send them on a quest, Noroelle promises to decide in favor of one or the other once the quest is over. But when Farodin and Nuramon return, they must learn that Noroelle gave birth to a demon child and was accused of treason. Emerelle has banished her to the Shattered World, a fragmented world between the world of man and elves. As Farodin and Nuramon know that Noroelle is incapable of any crime, they go on a quest to find and rescue their beloved. But on their journey through the centuries the two elves and their companions leave traces in the world of man, which lead to a new religion that finally poses a severe threat, not only to the elven world, but also to Noroelle.

KATHRIN SCHROCKE (illus. by Lilly L'Arronge) SHADOWS – MY FATHER HAS PTSD

Dad used to love playing with his kids, telling them stories and jokes. He used to be a carefree man. That is, until he went abroad as a serviceman, and came back changed. Something has gone terribly wrong, and what Dad brings home is more than a little unsettling. His somber, gloomy mood settles on the family, like long shadows. As time goes by, all shadows surrounding him are transforming. A popped balloon becomes an air raid, a breaking cup an explosion, his child's silly prank a deadly ambush. Post-traumatic stress disorder is a medical condition that can affect anyone, with severe impacts on their family life.

This book answers the most pressing questions of children of affected servicemen and women, it describes the symptoms of the disorder and convincingly shows that, among the worries and fears, there is hope.

REBEKKA REINHARD: SCHÖN (BEAUTIFUL)

Bestselling author Rebekka Reinhard has brought together our beauty-obsessed present and such diverse thinkers as Socrates or Lao Tse, delivering many a surprising eye-opener. She looks at a number of questions: Are there objective criteria for beauty, or is everything a matter of taste? What is the link between what is beautiful and what is good? Why are we sometimes attracted - as if by magic - to the bad and the ugly? We might only know the answers intuitively or perhaps not at all, but a lot can be explained with philosophy. The author looks behind the beautiful façade and gets to the bottom of the intellectual and emotional dimensions of the subject. In the process, one thing becomes clear: on the one hand, we might not be able to buy beauty, but it can be found everywhere and in ourselves if we are only prepared to see and acknowledge it.

We are living in a world of insecurity and disorientation, but our expectations and wishes are excessive. We are trying to function as smoothly as electric devices and boost our efficiency. Yet between perfectionism and pragmatism we lost sense, vitality and our joy of living. Rebekka Reinhard philosophically analyses reasons for and symptoms of our safety thinking and presents us an alternative in form of Odysseus, the errant hero. We have to learn to be brave and curious like him: daring to try the uncommon and foreign, facing borderline situations, accepting imperfection - this is the philosophical art of making mistakes. Then, we will no longer fear the risks of life but take them as an exciting adventure. With thrilling philosophical thought experiments.

DIE SINN-DIÄT (A DIET OF MEANING)

Searching for perfection is popular at the moment. We are looking for the perfect body, the perfect partner, the perfect work-life balance. Perfect stands for: efficient, effective, productive, easy to get, looking expensive, but on sale – and maximizes your pleasure. Always dissatisfied, we are waiting for the perfect life to begin. We have just forgotten that we already have everything needed for a fulfilled life. We do not need more meaning, we need less nonsense. This is why Rebekka Reinhard recommends a diet of meaning, with philosophical recipes. Clearly and entertainingly, the author explains how the messages of thinkers like Kierkegaard, Schopenhauer or Fromm can help to rid us from nonsense and to become open for happiness and meaning. In a thoughtful and witty manner, she imparts insights on what our professional and private efforts are for – and she gives practical advices.

WÜRD E PLATON PRADA TRAGEN? (WOULD PLATON WEAR PRADA?)

All things flow, not only champagne

Can philosophy help us to overcome our shoe addiction? To tolerate the imperfection of partner? Yes, it can! The author demonstrates this in more than 50 funny, satirical miniatures of the typical situations in women's lives, and deals out advice in the form of philosophical tidbits. Are you the perfect wife or mother, hard-working, even on your looks? Would you die for a Prada bag? Then you are one of these modern women fighting for survival in the lifestyle jungle. Even if you have nerves of steel: between telephone conference and coffee date, surrounded by bossy superiors, chatty friends and grumpy children you need a bit of support. Platon, Confucius et al. will help you keep your balance and your sense of humour. Benefit from the immortal knowledge of legendary philosophers. Exercise saying no or being right. Get your license to be lazy or to eat a box of chocolates. Rebekka Reinhard shows that philosophy is not only tough stuff but can be just as sparkling as a glass of champagne.

Matthias Horx

Matthias Horx is considered the most influential futurologist in the German-speaking world.

He worked as an author and editor on the magazines Tempo, Die Zeit and Merian. Horx was interested in science-fiction, change in values, youth cultures, and new technologies, and during this time laid the foundations for his future profession: In 1993, he co-founded the Trendbüro Hamburg. Trendbüro rapidly became the nexus of German marketing orientated trend research, and five years later Matthias Horx founded the Zukunftsinstitut. (www.zukunftsinstitut.de) The Zukunftsinstitut's main mission is to analyse and project fundamental societal developments, the economy and everyday life. With headquarters near Frankfurt, branches in Vienna and representatives in London, the economic and political think-tank is now very much in demand throughout Europe.

MATTHIAS HORX: FUTURE LOVE – THE FUTURE OF LOVE, SEX AND FAMILY

In near future, will there be „normal“ families anymore? Will we all live as singles? Will we be cloning beautiful children? Will the gender roles become obsolete? Will more and more people turn to dating virtual partners in cyberspace or to having fun with sex robots?

With this new project, Matthias Horx is presenting the first book that is approaching a “soft” topic like love from the perspective of trend research and futurology. He examines the change processes of family structures, love, and partnerships and is developing a panorama of future love culture that is stretching from the total digitalization of passion to “liquid love”, the concept of changing partnerships in various stages of life. The question that can be found in the center of his work is how we will work around the charged relationship between individual self-development and our desire for loyalty and stability.

MATTHIAS HORX: ZUKUNFT WAGEN (OUR FUTURE – A BOLD VENTURE)

Why do we tend to judge the prospects for the future negatively? Futurologist and convinced optimist Matthias Horx illustrates how perceptions of the future and expectations are created in our brain, and gut, and how we are guided by apparently imperturbable doctrines, traditions of thought and emotions.

Yet Horx shows us a better way: He contrasts these “myths of the future” with findings in various fields of research and creates a whole new image of the future; one that encourages us to face this ever changing world with calmness and prudence.

Megatrends mark the big changes in our society, with global, long lasting and profound effects: globalization, for example, demographic change, individualization or the changing representation of women. Matthias Horx describes the dynamics of these drivers of change and defines their role in the advancement of the modern world. To many people this world appears confusing, chaotic and going downhill. At the same time, societies today are more resilient and able to find new paths through complexity and networking. Brilliant as usual and entertaining, Matthias Horx connects the analysis of the transforming powers with a look at the most important megatrends.

Has criticism of religion reached its zenith in the 19th century with Schopenhauer, Marx and Freud and is it on the defensive since? A difficult question to answer, but it is evident that religion is a more tenacious opponent than early critics guessed when it was still labelled as opium of the people or mere illusion. Until now, psychology has treated the matter of just how powerful religion is too superficially. To a degree, this is to be remedied with this book in an effort to gain distance from fanaticism of any colour. It emancipates the reader's skepticism towards critics and inventors of illusions alike.

PSYCHOTHERAPIE IM ALTER (PSYCHOTHERAPY AND OLD AGE)

Mental and emotional problems of older and elderly people are as diverse as the people that have to deal with them. For psychotherapy, this means the need to analyse and specify the strains and burdens of older people, as well as the specific opportunities and developmental potentials of old age. These are, for example, the separation from the children, retirement, death, decay and changes in sex life. Yet, growing older offers a few perks, too, like tolerance, leniency, experience and wisdom.

Generation anxiety: Never before have so many people had so much to lose as they do today. We are insured against everything but still we wander the streets in depressing discontent. Every tenth person suffers from anxieties, every twentieth from an actual anxiety disorder. It becomes evident however, that more perilous than fear and anxiety is the belief that one can escape them. Schmidbauer examines where fear should be tolerated as a part of life, where it is produced, and how to face it. This book is more than analysis of a contemporary phenomenon; it is about the art of living, and surviving difficult times.

What is behind this phenomenon and why do young men become terrorists? What traumas lie buried in the biographies of these men and how can they be revealed, treated or even healed? Wolfgang Schmidbauer analyses the motivations of young terrorists and uses case studies to exemplify the influence of mass media. The returning officers of the World War were often strained by their children's joyfulness, they seemed upset and strung. The extreme emotional strains of war induced post-traumatic stress with consequences reaching far beyond war into the times of peace. Schmidbauer impressively demonstrates how the German society is still deeply affected by the collective trauma that is World War II. Drawing on case studies, he traces the traumas throughout families' histories and presents. He explains that relationship and work problems and depression of adult sons and daughters are often founded in these traumas and how, despite them, there can be recovery.

Ageing offers special skills and strengths, which we can benefit from. On the basis of cutting-edge scientific research, Korte illustrates the processes of cerebral ageing. He busts the myth that thinking and memory abilities slow down with advanced age. At the same time, he shows how we can face ageing more resolutely – because the process neither begins with the retirement, nor does it run a rigid course. For example, our own expectations about ageing have an effect on our later mental capacity. And this means: We are capable of influencing the ageing process of our own brain. Rights sold: Germany (Random House/DVA)  Rights available: World
